Tutoring Experience

I began my tutoring journey in 2011, working with students from secondary school to undergraduate levels. Over the years, I've supported IB students preparing for Psychology SL and HL, helping them master key topics like cognitive and developmental psychology. My experience also includes assisting students with Cambridge A-Level and AP Psychology curricula.

In addition to coursework, I have guided students through extended essays and research-based assignments, offering insights into structuring arguments and applying psychological theories effectively. My background in clinical psychology allows me to bring real-world examples into lessons, which many students find engaging.

My global experience includes working with students from Europe, North America, and Asia. This diversity has given me an adaptable approach to different academic needs and cultural contexts, helping students achieve their goals across a range of educational systems.
